HONGKONG, November 1st 1898.

LUED CHARLES BERESFORD'S mission ha already borne fruit, the Tsungli Yamen having granted him two thousand men to be drilled by English officers. This is presumably intended as the nucleus of a foreign drilled Chinese army. The commencement is a small one; but everything must have a beginning. We hope that Lord inducing the Chinese Government to set about reforming the civil administration. The placing of the military forces of China on a sound footing would go a long way towards setting the country on its legs again and enabling it to withstand aggression, but so long as rottenness and corruption prevail in the heart of the administration so long will the country's strength run to waste. It is not in the army and navy alone that foreign advice and assistance are guard of Volunteers with fixed bayonets placed tory dividends of 10 per cent, to those who gave required; they are no less necessary in the civil administration in all its departments. One of the first steps should be the placing of the internal revenue system under foreign direction. A commencement has already been made in this direction by placing the collection of lekin at the Yangteze ports in the hands of the Foreign Customs, and it is to be hoped that the same principle will shortly be adopted in other parts of the Empire, and especially along the West River. Withan honest fiscal administration and a foreign wrilled army and mavy China would once again occupy the position in the world to which her population and the importance of her natural re-sources entitle her.

The success of Lord CHARLES BERESPORT affords a welcome proof that the recent Palace revolution has not put an absolute stop to all progress in the country. It is possible, indeed, that recent events may even help it along, though on somewhat different lines from those laid down by KANO YU-WEI and his friends. The party now in power, if they are capable of learning by experience, must have realised the dauger incurred by attempting to resist reform, and may be induced to look for advice in quarters where they are likely to be honestly served. Everyone must of course sympathise with the young Emperor who has been so rudely hurled from power, but if he be still alive there is yet a posmibility of his being ultimately restored to his rightful position. In the meantime the Empress Downger is in power. We are not concerned now to discuss the personal character of this old lady, which is far from being such as to excite admiration, but after the chorus of execration with which ber usurpation has been greeted it is perhapsonly justice to suggest that when she discovered that a plot for her "removal" was on the everfexecution she acted as most persons siniilarly circumstanced would have done in have "removed" her. The Empress Downger may deserve all the hard things that are said about her, but it does not follow that because she is not what she ought to be those opposed to her are angels of light. KANG YU-WEI may be credited with good intentions and patriotism, but in discretion he has been wefully lacking. All foreigners are agreed as to the necessity of reform in China, but it is not necessary or wise to throw thomselves into the arms of the first lond tongued revolutionist that presents hoped that such measures of reform as may be adopted will be characterised by ordinary prudence and common sense,

STREET BOW OR RIOT?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS." STR,-I was astonished to see Mr. Smith's etter in your issue of 29th inst. trying to belittle what the French authorities did here so like to pass it off as a light matter when a Pilcher, and Alex. Ress (Secretary). yelling, howling mob of idlers, rogies, and vagabonds threaten quiet foreigners with annihilation and make free use of bricks and stones, and would be persist in calling it a street row when Consuls are hit on their faces and Commandants of Volunteers on their backs f This may be Mr. Smith's view, but he, of all people, should have refrained from giving expression to it in such a carping spirit, to aliay fears as he declared. Your correspondent's view, as given in your issue of 27th inst., is more correct and upbiassed, and this I have po

AN IMPARTIAL EYE-WITNESS.

Canton, 31st October, 1898. CHARLES may achieve equal success in published a letter signed by Mr. F. B. Smith, saying that "the heading of your paragraph Riot at Canton: An attack on Shameen averted, is really too geneational, but it is only and 1899, it was thought desirable to have the because it is likely to cause unnecessary alarm to people who have friends here that I object to it." Having read the paragraph your correspondent referred to, and being a resident and an eye-witness to the disturbance on the might in question. I believe Mr. Smith's statement must have been gathered from unreliable sources or from hearsay. If it was only a street row and no attack on Shameen was ever intended cortainly the Volunteers of the British Concession would not have been called out, nor a on the West bridge, besides the presence of a vs business. The balance of $18,210.38 has British gunboat just opposite the British Consulate on the following morning. If Mr. Smith's sole object in publishing his view is to ridicule the action taken by the popular and energetic British Consul in calling out the Volunteers and requesting the presence of a gunboat, &c., it is year, as is usually done, as the accounts are certainly bad taste on his part to publicly expose our weakness to our neighbours, especially in this present critical time. As to his view and opinion with regard to what constitutes a riot, let me for his edification refer him to Geo. I. Stat. 2 chap, 5 section 1, which provides "that if any persons to the number of twelve or more. being unlawfully riotously and tumultnously assembled together to the disturbance of public | unanimonsly. Mr. Smith concludes by saying-"As soon as the mandarin and about twenty of his braveboys armed with bell mouthed blunderbusses appeared on the scene, this riotons bloodthirsty mel, burning to loot Shameen, melted like snow. > give some explanation of the reasons that have induced the directors to call a meeting in October instead of in April of next year. The chief object in having a accoud meeting in this year is to inaugurate a change which we have for cometime past thought desirable, that is to hold the annual meetings in the Antumn instead of in the Spring. As you are hware our accounts are closed on December 31st, and in these days, when business is conducted on such a keen competitive basis and profits are consequently problematical, it is a most impossible to estimate closely the result of the year's working so early as in April, when there are usually very large outstanding liabilities, the greater part of which are run off before October. But in order interval between the annual meetings of 1808 meeting in October, and in future the annual meeting will be held in that month. It is not necessary to pass any special resolution to this effect, as the articles of association merely require that the general meeting shall be held once year. We therefore hope that the change will meet with the approval of shareholders, as it is the course adopted by most other insurance offices With reference to the accounts, you will see that the year 1897 has been closed by a payment of 10 per cent, interest to shareholders and contribubeen brought forward, and there is a credit balance of $237,642.60. This, in a year which has been a very disastrons one for all underwriting, is very satisfactory. It is impossible to compare the year 1898 with the previous only for six months, but we kope with this eredit balance and the continuance of a moderate amount of good luck that we may be able to his body, of which three in the abdomon and present a statement of account entirely satisfactory to shareholders.

WOUNDS OF THE HEART

According to popular ideas a parson who rounded in the heart drops down doad on the spot. This notion is erroneous; the victim (saye the British Medical Journal) usually lives for several minutes till sufficient blood has been forced out of the wounded chamber into the pericardium to cause fatal compression of the heart from without. In the more suddenly fatal cases blood escopes freely into the mediastinum through a wound in the perioardium, or death is instantaneous from shock due to damage to the sympathetic or pneumogastric norve. It has bowever, long boon known to surgeons that immediate death does not always follow a wound of the beart. To those who may read these lines it may appear as if one wished to exaggerate but this would be almost an impossibility, and it was only when we passed out of the country on the bighway between Nijmegan and Cleve that we left behind the banners and streamers. What was witnessed at the other places we journeyed through was simply a repetition of what we had seen at Rotterdam. The troops were being reviewed in the ancient market place at Gouda as we arrived, and after the dismissal of the soldiery came the singing by all the school children, on specially erected platforms, and it was with the utmost difficulty that we tore curselves away. By five o'clook in the afternoon we had reached Utrecht, whose megnificent church tower had been a kind of beacon for us for miles before we reached this famed seat of learning. In order to prouse the enthusiasm of the Datch cycling community, a series of three matches had been arranged between Mevers, the champion of the Netherlands, and China, the English champion. These proved to be most unantinfactory, for when each of the ridera had wan one roos. Chinn. brought down his opponent in the final run, and was promptly disqualified. I give bare facts as they reached me a couple of days afterwards, and nothing extenuate or set down sught in malice. But the sequel was rather ful and easy going the Dutch usually are. No sooner was their companion down than China was hooted at terribly, and after missiles of the most dangerous kind had been buried at him most victopsly he was quickly surrounded upon dismounting by an angry orowd, who three leved summary vengemos. A friend of mine who was an eye witness describes the incident as being exciting in the extreme. Chinn himself is a big, well set up fellow, with powerful limbs and the plack of a Briton, but he could do little against the how ing, exasperated crowd who had swarmed ever the parriers on to the enclosure. But they were not to wreak their vengeance on the English rider nuite to readily, it appears, for the Dunlop pacing teams were near at hand, and they at and afforded him protection and he was got eway without serious molestation. For a moment. however, the mituation was desperate, and but for the intervention of the party of English yelista Chinn might have been severely mauled There is conflicting testimony as to what really happened in the race, but it is some satisfaction to know that Meyers who, at any rate, was as much interested as anyone in the matter. exonerates his rival entirely, and explains in a letter that the accident was caused by the state of the track.
